Sheffield Haworth is pleased to share with you our 2020 Wealth Management Market Review. In addition to our usual commentary, we have devoted a further section to the subject of Diversity, Equity & Inclusion (DEI). We recognise we have a part to play in helping our Wealth clients continue to develop a diverse and inclusive workforce and that this can extend beyond hiring externally, such as through cultural assessment programmes and talent development. The Appendix, as usual, lists Key People Moves across the sector during 2020.

SECTION 1: 2020 REVIEW

Q1 2020:

- Following the 2019 General Election and further Brexit progress which led to the UK's departure from the EU on 31st Jan 2020, Sheffield Haworth achieved record revenues in Q1.
- Wealth Management businesses moved into growth mode and the Sheffield Haworth practice was working on more searches than at any other point in time for the past three years.
- And then Covid.....

Q2 2020:

- Wealth Management companies focused all attention on their clients and the welfare of their employees.
  - Long term planning meant next week, not next quarter or next year. It was Work From Home (WFH) logistics and managing investment performance through the market turmoil.
  - Of our pipeline of searches, approximately a quarter were cancelled, a quarter were put on hold and the remaining 50% continued to move forwards, albeit cautiously.
- Hiring plans focused on critical gaps identified by remote working operations. Additional client relationship managers? No thank you. New COO / CTO to execute the 3-year change plan in three months instead? Yes please.

“Of our pipeline of searches, approximately a quarter were cancelled, a quarter were put on hold and the remaining 50% continued to move forwards.”

Mid 2020:

- WFH was working. Investment markets were calmer and largely recovering their losses.
- There was an increasing confidence that revenue targets for 2020 might be achieved. Indeed, active advisory and trading activity pointed to a potentially stronger year than initially envisaged.
- It was mainly the small number of private banks that rely most heavily on banking and lending business which were more negatively impacted by lower interest rates and which were not propped up by improving investment revenues.

- At this point Net New Money (NNM)/ growth targets had gone out of the window and the real 'win' was keeping clients.

Q3 2020:

- Some Wealth leaders began telling us that they were increasingly encouraged by their NNM figures. We noted especially that some of the pure play private banks were reporting an increase in NNM, perhaps because of their predominantly investment led propositions.
- However, performance commentary within subsets of the Wealth Management sector began to differ. Some were cautious and focused purely on maintaining revenues whilst other firms were distinctly more active when hunting for new business and claiming success.

“ Wealth leaders began telling us they were increasingly encouraged by their NNM figures. ”

- With markets having steadied and remote working largely proving sustainable, thoughts were already turning to 2021. The prevailing sense was that if 2020 was to be a flat year then it would become even more important to make the most of 2021.
- Three year and five year growth plans had essentially lost a year, but this would be manageable if it could be confined to just one year.
- How to maximise growth potential in 2021? Execute Change programmes; Have the right people in the right seats; Ensure that leadership and talent are performing to their full potential.
- There is a lead time that comes with this and therefore by September 2020 we were already in dialogue with many businesses about their 2021 needs. The volume of pitches that we attended picked up and there was encouraging momentum.
- Hiring requirements were still weighted heavily towards leadership and corporate functions, but gradually we also saw interest in relationship managers and business developers.

“ Hiring requirements were still weighted heavily towards leadership and corporate functions. ”

Q4 2020:

- Just as it seemed that the fourth quarter would be extremely busy executing work, the second virus peak and subsequent lock down kicked in and momentum slowed. But this time, there was no major concern or change of strategic direction. Just the timing of it.
  - No longer was it necessary to have the right people in the right seats by Jan 1st 2021, rather businesses are now focused on being game ready for the second quarter of 2021.
- This still involves a lead time and at the time of writing at the end of December, we have now resumed active pitching for new work and are busy executing searches with a view to Q1 completion around the time of bonuses – or lack of, as the case may be.

“ We have now resumed active pitching for new work and are executing searches with a view to Q1 completion. ”

SECTION 2: LOOKING AHEAD

- 2021 will bring uncertainty, challenge and opportunity in equal measure. Low interest rates will hit balance sheets but help growth prospects. Technology investment will continue to demonstrate its worth. Organic growth will require wealth creation. Consolidation will no doubt continue, especially across the Advice sector.
- Whilst revenues held up during 2020, the environment became cost conscious and many businesses cut overheads, especially through headcount reductions. This mindset will continue in the year ahead in a desire to maximise margins. Relocating and outsourcing operations will become the norm.

- With an increased virtual relationship with clients, digital propositions will come under the microscope. Wealth organisations which leverage data to further understand their clients and to better target prospects will increase wallet share and NNM more successfully. Yet if nothing else, Covid has also demonstrated the importance of relationships and trust between wealth managers and their clients. However digital the world becomes it is in times of stress that people want to engage with people.
- Sustainability will continue to be a key theme and an area of growth within the industry. As will demand for private market investments from HNW and mass affluent clients.
- We expect hiring activity to increase in the first half of 2021 as Wealth firms target a growth agenda. Combining this with a wide variation in bonus payments across the industry, it is likely to create a relatively fertile candidate environment. Continuing the theme of the last few years, 'planning-led' relationship managers and business development oriented financial planners will continue to command a premium.
- For the last four years we have also needed to mention Brexit, and its uncertain impact on the financial services industry. Yet again, despite a trade deal having now been concluded, there will surely be continued impact on Wealth managers in the year ahead, whether directly or indirectly through the economy and prospects for wealth creation.

“ Covid has demonstrated the importance of relationships and trust between wealth managers and their clients. ”

SECTION 3: DIVERSITY, EQUITY & INCLUSION

- As Covid impacted business across the Wealth Management industry during 2020, we initially thought that the subject of Diversity, Equity & Inclusion (DEI) might be pushed down the list of priorities. However, we were encouraged to see that in fact the opposite occurred. With employee welfare being front and centre, we found this dovetailed effectively with conversation around DEI.
- Sheffield Haworth held many virtual HR roundtables throughout last year. During those, and in our conversations with Wealth Management leadership more broadly, DEI was consistently and increasingly raised as an important theme.
- There is no doubt, and plenty of research to support, that businesses which have a diverse and inclusive leadership team will be better equipped to recover after the struggles of last year and likely to achieve better performance in the years to come.
- Whilst remote working may have brought flexibility and a better work life balance for many, it will also have had a detrimental impact on aspects of DEI. It is much harder to foster an inclusive culture remotely. Furthermore, how equitable is a home office environment for those without proper home office space or infrastructure? Or for those home schooling their children? Many employees may also be uncomfortable sharing aspects of their home life on video conferencing calls, further isolating them.
- Hiring diverse talent alone is not enough for Wealth Managers to create a successful team. Creating an inclusive environment is also vital to achieve high performance. Some organisations have engaged with DEI practitioners who can provide virtual workshops and training to help with this to limit the negative impacts working from home may have on company culture.
- An assessment of a company's culture can also help its leadership to truly understand the impact their working environment is having on their DEI programmes.

“Sheffield Haworth held many virtual HR roundtables and DEI was consistently and increasingly raised as an important theme.”

DIVERSITY WITHIN WEALTH MANAGEMENT

- Throughout 2020 there has been a continued drive to appoint senior females to boards and executive committees but an ongoing struggle to find diverse talent. Despite best intentions, many Wealth organisations struggle to find the most effective process to address this matter.
- Recruiting, retaining and developing diverse talent is vital for Wealth companies. However, as a Talent Consultancy, we at Sheffield Haworth are the first to recognise the challenges of diverse hiring when there is a limited pool at the more senior end of the market.

- We encourage our clients to consider lateral candidates and to ensure a diverse short list at interview stage. Importantly, we also note those organisations that alter their interview process to make sure it is inclusive and suited to a breadth of individuals.
- In an environment where headcount and hiring is limited, another solution for Wealth Managers is to prioritise developing and upskilling existing talent within their own organisations.
- To further understand diversity within the wealth management marketplace, we undertook our own research to identify the percentage of females within senior wealth management positions in the UK.

Chief Financial Officers

Head of Front Office

Chief Risk Officers

Senior UHNW Private Bankers

*Sample 75 UK Wealth Managers

“ We encourage our clients to ensure a diverse short list at interview stage. ”

OUR COMMITMENT TO DEI

- Sheffield Haworth’s Wealth Management practice is fully committed to helping our clients achieve a diverse and inclusive working environment.
- We recognise the importance we play in helping organisations achieve their DEI goals and our role as the point of contact between diverse candidates and employers. For this reason, we are constantly evolving our practices to make sure we have the best access to diverse talent and ensure continuous engagement with these individuals.
- We work closely with our Talent Development & Advisory practice to make sure our clients have access to a team that can help them transform their culture to be more inclusive and to help them develop their own diverse talent.

- To enable best practice company wide, Sheffield Haworth has an internal DEI Committee with sub-groups covering ethnicity, gender equality, LGBTQ+, neurodiversity and physical disability. This committee has also provided educational workshops to our employees and organised industry events to promote DEI.
- Sheffield Haworth is a proud ambassador of the Diversity Project whose aim is to accelerate progress towards an inclusive culture in the investment and savings profession.
- Finally, as a member of the Association of Executive Search and Leadership Consultants (AESC) we work collaboratively with other members within our industry to be leaders of DEI change.

“ Sheffield Haworth is a proud ambassador of the Diversity Project whose aim is to accelerate progress towards an inclusive culture in the investment and savings profession.”

SECTION 4: TALENT CONSULTANCY

Sheffield Haworth has grown well beyond its Executive Search roots and today we advise organisations on people and transformational change in a much broader capacity. Our business is made up of three pillars:

1. Executive Search
2. Consulting & Advisory
3. Talent Development & Advice

Whilst shamelessly plugging the breadth of our offering, the point in highlighting this is that we engage with our clients across a broad spectrum and this in turn enables us to observe more trends and have greater access and insight into leadership thinking.

INTERIM CONSULTING & ADVISORY

- 2020 has impacted the Wealth Management industry's demands on employees in a distinct and notable way, accelerating the digital agenda and need to drive operational efficiencies for many firms.
  - The year's challenges necessitated many short term and relatively immediate change initiatives, involving corporate functions such as Technology, Risk & Compliance and Finance.
- It is common in these circumstances for businesses to lack specific technical knowledge or strategic expertise. At Sheffield Haworth we remained busy throughout the year introducing specialist consultants to Wealth organisations who can bring in deep and specific expertise when needed most.
  - We have seen clients increasingly use experienced Interim Executives to provide critical cover in the short to mid-term, whilst the permanent solution is determined. In these instances, we often run a concurrent Search assignment to identify the successor and this process can be led and overseen by the Interim consultant.

“The year's challenges necessitated many short term change programmes, involving Technology, Risk & Compliance and Finance.”

TALENT DEVELOPMENT & ADVICE

- The challenges brought about by Covid have thrown a focus on employees like never before, whether relating to welfare, diversity or leadership.
- Who are the future leaders of your organisation? Do you have the right talent pipeline in place for future leaders? Is there succession planning in place? What are you doing to increase diversity within your organisation?
- We saw an increase in demand for 'Assessment for Selection' offerings – the need to more closely assess and profile candidates through psychometric testing, competency-based interviewing and more. All highly necessary given the increasingly virtual component of most hiring processes.
- We have seen an increased focus on culture and a need to coach and develop disparate leadership teams that are likely to work more remotely in the future.

“ We have seen a need to coach and develop disparate leadership teams that are likely to work more remotely in the future. ”
